Prof. Dr. Karin Molling, renowned virologist and Fmr. Director of the Institute for Medical Virology in Sweden, says "I feel that what is going on right now is what we experience more or less every winter. [...] The contagion is high. But in my view, the disease is not as bad as influenza. [...] I believe that you only look at one thing selectively here and fill it with a certain panic."

Dr. Pablo Goldschmidt, virologist, says: "Yes, like a cold--people die of it in old people's homes. So far, you haven't counted them, but now you do."

Prof. Dr. Gerd Bosbach, professor of Statistics, Mathematics & Empirical Economic & Social Research, says: "First of all, the tripling of the tests resulted in a little more than tripling the number of those who tested positive. This tripling was demonstrated to the citizens as a tripling of the infected. [...] The government's standard of when measures should be weakened is based on an apparent number of infected people, which has nothing to do with reality."

Dr. Michael Levitt, professor of structural biology at Stanford Medical School and winner of the 2013 Nobel Prize in chemistry, recently stated, "There is no doubt in my mind that when we come to look back on this, the damage done by lockdown will exceed any saving of lives by a huge factor."
